C.A.W.E.S.' standard protocol for safety is that if a resident is much later than their stated expected return time, or if they are not back to shelter by midnight, staff will attempt to call the listed emergency contact and/ or contact police for a welfare check. If there is an alternate way that you'd like staff to handle a situation like this, including phoning you first, phoning other shelter programs, calling the Mustard Seed, calling police immediately, or calling other contacts, can you please let me know what that is? If so:
